An introduction to Tavistock

Tavistock offers a bustling high street with a wealth of independent & boutique shops. The town has a vibrant Pannier Market, granted a Royal Charter in 1105, and an abundant selection of cafes, pubs & bistros for visitors to enjoy everything from a Cornish pasty to a Devon Cream Tea

Gateway to Cornwall and West Devon mining World Heritage sites. Tavistock is a charming market town on the western fringes of Dartmoor National Park with a history dating back to at least 961 when Tavistock Abbey was founded.

Sir Francis Drake was born to the west of what is now Tavistock College, later making his home at nearby Buckland Abbey, now a National Trust property and museum to Drake.

The town's industry was founded on tin and copper mining. Visitors can take a stroll along the canal - opened in 1817 to carry copper to Morwellham Quay - one of the country's few mineral canals.

Situated in the heart of an area of tremendous natural beauty and a World Heritage Site, Tavistock is still a thriving market town, the largest in West Devon, with a rich and varied history; well worth a visit.
